

MOHAMMED QASIM ASHFAQ

b. 1982, Falkirk, UK. Lives and works in Dunfermline, UK.

Mohammed Qasim Ashfaq's work is an invitation to look at the world - to look again and look better. An artist of dual Scottish and Pakistani heritage, his visual language is a space of meeting and confluence, invoking the tessellation of Islamic ornament and mysticism alongside sharp technological precision. In his work, shapes we consider stable are collapsed and reconstructed as fluid sculptural energy, exploring dichotomies of light and space, opacity and reflection. Virtues of patience and meditation and material reverence are embedded within a slow but fierce propulsion to the future - one where ideals of modernism and science fiction are held in creative tension with traditions of craft and devotion. His drawings - monochrome works composed exclusively of graphite - are produced through an exacting line by line process administered directly with pencil, compass and ruler, shimmering between qualities of pure surface and limitless depth, echoing through both interior and exterior worlds, the cognitive and embodied, the secular and the sacred.
